SEP Policy Briefs

Marcello Messori, "The frying pan burns less than the fire. Why Italy should not go out of the euro"

Leaving the euro or staying in the area is not an alternative that offers symmetrical advantages and disadvantages to Italy and to other "peripheral" Member States, as it would happen if these countries had to decide to enter or not in a new currency area from outside...

Carlo Bastasin, "Defending The Wolf. The Useful Contradiction of the Bundesbank"

The Deutsche Bundesbank, the German central bank, is commonly regarded as the Euroarea's boogeyman. The pressure imparted by the German monetary authority, for instance, rendered the European Central Bank reluctant to follow the footprints of the Federal Reserve and...

SEP Working Papers

Canofari, Marini, Piersanti "Expectations and systemic risk in EMU government bond spread"

Concetta Brescia Morra, "From the single supervisory mechanism to the banking union. The role of the ECB and the EBA"

Claudio Fassio, "Sectoral Systems or Distance-to-the-Frontier effects in innovation? A comparison of three medium-technology sectors in Germany, Italy and Spain"

Other

Micossi, Bruzzone, Cassella, "Bail-in Provisions in State Aid and Resolution Procedures: Are they consistent with systemic stability?"

Marco Buti, Philipp Mohl, "Lacklustre investment in the Eurozone: Is there a puzzle?"
